

DUMPUKHT

The traditional restaurant is a revival of the ancient art of cooking, which involves slow-roasting food over a low fire in a sealed pot, known as a handi. A combination of two Persian words 'dum' and 'pukht', Dumpukht literally means 'to breathe and to cook' in reference to the traditional cooking method, which was introduced by the Nawabs of Awadh in Northern India in the 18th century. In this cooking method, meat slowly roasts and braises in its own juices inside the pot, which is sealed with a dough crust and herbs are intensified, adding layers to the final dish.
